

Dear Future Patients and Families,

I am honored and excited to continue Dr. Savusalo's legacy of orthodontic excellence and dedicated patient care. Together with my wife Ashley, who will be the practice manager of the newly named Carlotto Orthodontics, we are excited to serve our community of Newton, a place we also call home. Our philosophy is simple: we believe in treating every patient with the same warmth and respect we extend to our own family.

Ashley and I bring nearly 20 years of combined experience to you. After graduating dental school at The Harvard School of Dental Medicine, I attended The Ohio State University where I completed my orthodontic speciality training and received a Master of Science degree. I have practiced orthodontics in Massachusetts for the last decade, treating patients of all ages, while Ashley has expertly managed both dental and orthodontic offices. I am also a member of the American Association of Orthodontists and guest lecturer at Harvard.

Outside of the office, I enjoy quality time with family and friends, exercising, and traveling, especially with my family to Block Island, where we have vacationed for many years. At home, Ashley and I love being with our two cats, Sienna and Brady (named after Tom- of course!), and our dog Marty. I'm also a big fan of all our Boston sports teams and am hoping for our next championship season soon!

Rest assured that your comfort and treatment goals remain the highest priority. You will continue to see the same fantastic team members and be welcomed into the same warm environment you know.

My sincerest congratulations to Dr. Savusalo and I look forward to meeting you soon and caring for your smiles for many years to come!

Warmly,

Alan Carlotto, DMD, MS
